Looking back at 2014

A tornado and severe thunderstorms ripped through Gallatin County in early July causing hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to marinas, homes and schools. Above is the twisted wreckage from a destroyed dock at Smugglers Cove. Photos by Kelley Warnick

The girls basketball team celebrated winning the District Championship in March. There was more celebrating in October after the girls soccer team also won the district title.

Nationally known tractor puller Wayne Sullivan thrilled Gallatin County fans in May. It was the first time he competed in his home county in 12 years

Fire Chief Barry Alexander announced his retirement as EMS director in April.

Veteran School Superintendent Dot Perkins also announced her retirement in April.

Bonnie Bishop (left) voted in the May Primary at the Upper Warsaw Precinct. 2014 was a busy year in local politics. Judge/Executive Ken McFarland, Sheriff Josh Neale and County Attorney Spike Wright were re-elected.

Mother Nature kept Mark Kearns and others busy in 2014. It was the third snowiest year on record.

Emily Plummer was crowned Miss Gallatin County Fair in June.

Lawmakers will try to stem heroin epidemic

Kentucky's lawmakers filled the state Capitol Tuesday to begin the 2015 legislative session. During their first days in session, the senators and representatives will elect their leaders and begin to discuss a variety of issues ranging from stabilizing the state's Road Fund to implementing a statewide smoking ban.

At the end of this week, members of the 2015 General Assembly will adjourn until Feb. 3 when they'll come back to Frankfort and begin the law-making process that will last until March 24.

One of the leading issues the lawmakers will confront is trying to combat the heroin epidemic that has affected many in Gallatin County and the rest of the state.

Proposals include giving an addict a better chance to receive treatment if he's arrested.

Other proposals include a provision to allow needle exchanges. That approach is favored by public health officials trying to stop the spread of hepatitis and HIV but is disliked by conservatives not wanting to appear soft on crime.

Another proposal increases penalties for dealing heroin and other opiates without increasing funding for treatment of addicts.

There were 72 heroin-related overdoses reported last year. See Legislature, page 3

We dodge the snow but not the cold

Gallatin County missed most of the snow that caused significant travel problems north of here Monday night. It's not expected, however, to dodge the bone-chilling temperatures that will flow into the area on Wednesday.

Arctic air will surge into the county early Wednesday morning and temperatures are predicted to fall near zero or below. Brisk winds will arrive with the cold front pushing wind chill factors well below zero for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

On a positive note, forecasters say little precipitation is expected this week so snow will not be a problem.

High temperatures will struggle to reach double digits until Friday with lows near zero.

Temperatures will begin to moderate on Saturday and climb above freezing on Sunday.

Jobless rate stays low

Gallatin County's unemployment rate rose slightly in November but continues to be low according to the Kentucky Workforce Development Cabinet.

The state's figures say the jobless rate here climbed to 5.6 percent in November from October's rate of 5.0 percent. There were 222 unemployed workers in the county in November out of a workforce of 3,762.

Unemployment also climbed slightly in the eight-county Northern Kentucky area from 4.5 percent in October to 4.9 percent in November. Across the state, unemployment climbed from 5.3 percent in October to 5.8 percent in November.

Boone and Woodford counties had the lowest jobless rates in the state in November at 4.5 percent each.

The highest unemployment in Kentucky in November was once again found in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. Jackson County had the state's highest unemployment rate at 12.3 percent.

Fiscal Court meeting date changed

The January meeting of the Gallatin County Fiscal Court has been changed. Instead of meeting on the second Thursday of the month (Jan. 8) as usual, the court will meet a week later on Jan. 15.

The meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center in Warsaw.

2015 looks like it'll be quite a year

This and That

By Kelley Warnick

I couldn't wait to get to work Monday morning. That's because it was time to pull out the Gallatin County News' crystal ball.

My father showed me the ball's magic powers many years ago. Since that day, I've sat down with it the first Monday in January to get a glimpse of what the New Year has in store for us.

The crystal ball says the first big news of the year will come at the January meeting of the fiscal court when its learned the folks at Disneyland want to open a theme park at the county's new property along the Ohio River.

"I don't like the idea," Magistrate Joe Shinkle will say. "I'm afraid Mickey, Minnie and all their weird friends would scare off the deer and ruin hunting out there."

It looks like February's cold weather will give new Warsaw Mayor Nelson Brown an interesting idea.

"Let's flood that old wheel factory in town and turn it into an skating rink," the mayor will tell city council. "Maybe we'll make enough off concessions to buy a new fire truck."

Our crystal ball says the county will celebrate in March and April when Kentucky completes an undefeated basketball season and beats Duke 130 to 12 to win the NCAA Championship. Mayor Brown skating rink at the wheel factory starts to melt in May.

"I don't know what we'll do with all that water," the Mayor will say. "Maybe we could turn it into a swimming pool and make enough money to build a new firehouse."

In June, the crystal ball says County Clerk Tracy Miles will announce there are 285 candidates running in the special election for an opening on the school board.

July could be a big month around here. That's because the ball indicates the civic minded dancers from Racers Strip Club agree to be honorary life guards at the mayor's swimming pool for the July 4th holiday. The resulting traffic jam of swimmers trying to get into the pool will shut down traffic from Cincinnati to Louisville for days.

The ball says we'll learn in September that Disney still has plans to turn the county's property into a Wonderland Park despite the reservations of Magistrate Shinkle.

"Goofy and Donald had better stay away from my door unless they want to see the business end of my 16 gauge," Shinkle will warn.

2015 ends, according to our Crystal Ball, with the Farmers Almanac predicting the approaching winter will be one of the most severe the county has ever seen.

"Let's get our skating rink open," Mayor Brown will say. "We have room for at least one more fire truck in that firehouse we built."

Of course, I can't guarantee the accuracy of our Crystal Ball. Right or wrong, however, I can't wait for the excitement to begin.

Praise for Gallatin's school board members

Dear Editor:

The students and teachers, the administrators and the service workers of the Gallatin County School System deserve praise for working hard in their roles. But equally deserving of praise are members of the district's Board of Education, not only for their work, but for their leadership.

Sonya Giles, Alex Tainsh, Chad Murray and Dicky Wilson are more than just elected officials. They are the link between the school district's citizens and its schools.

They make tough decisions, set policy for their district and create the conditions that enable students to succeed. In their individual walks of life as residents here, they are also part of the fiber of our community.

Kentucky has chosen to join other states in observing January as School Board Member Recognition Month, the 20th year in which it has done so. Our local school board members merit this appreciation.

As the demands of high-stakes accountability have increased for our schools, the job of our local board members has likewise become increasingly complex, requiring more time, training and knowledge.

They also must ensure the safety and maintenance of school buildings and buses, support teachers by making sure they have adequate professional development, lead the charge for programs that help students at every level and closely monitor the finances of the school system.

There's not a single aspect of overall district operation that isn't tied to the work of our board members.

I'm pleased to join with other community members in thanking the members of our Board of Education this month for what they do on behalf of our children.

News criticized over animal shelter coverage

Dear Editor:

I'm appalled and dismayed after reading your front page story about the inspection of the Gallatin County Animal Shelter.

I'd been under the impression you supported the shelter but the story you printed was a political PR job, whitewashing what Bob Nunn and Ken McFarland have done, both to the shelter and former director Robin Costello.

She raised all the money for the complete remodel, yard work, painting, floors, heating and air conditioning through donations and applying for grants.

She oversaw the work and put in countless hours of her own time to turn the shelter into one we could be proud of.

Now, Bob Nunn and Ken McFarland would like to take the credit and vilify her with untrue and unproven accusations which you've printed without checking the facts.

A friend and I went to the shelter and asked to see the dogs because we were thinking of adopting one. We were told by Sean Raybourne that the shelter was closed to the public and adoptions were not allowed. He then called the police to throw us out.

I called magistrate Dudley Gullion and told him under KRS 258.119 law, the shelter must be open 25 hours a week. Now, there's a handwritten note on the door stating the hours it's open.

Also under KRS 61.850 to 61.991, there are laws concerning open meetings any time the business or financial operation of a public agency is discussed and I have not heard of any posted.

This is a public agency, funded with public money. How it's run should not be decided in secret meetings by one or two people.

When I went to the shelter on Dec. 23, I was asked for identification when I walked in. Why?

I was finally allowed in, but there was only one dog and it was to be taken (supposedly) to a rescue that day.

I asked where the dogs were and was told the Judge's office told them not to take puppies or cats and all the dogs were taken to rescues.

I do not believe rescues will take every dog that comes in, so, I want to know: where are the dogs?

Shelters all over the country are becoming "no kill" and are trying to improve the conditions for the animals.

They're aware the public is not happy with the inhumane treatment prevalent in many shelters. This is the direction our shelter was going until recently.

If you're going to print news, you need to actually investigate the situation and not just take the word of the politically motivated people who have created the situation.

Kentucky Commentary

Is legislature growing more corrupt?

A national survey of 280 reporters ranks Kentucky No. 1 in "legal corruption," including favors in return for campaign contributions, and No. 3 in "illegal corruption," including bribery.

The research indicates Kentucky is No. 1 in perceived corruption overall, because no other state had such a high combined ranking of the two types. Both Kentucky's executive and legislative branches scored poorly.

Kentucky was one of only two states (New Jersey was the other), where the reporters deemed legal corruption "extremely common" in the executive branch.

They saw illegal corruption as "very common" only in New Jersey and Arizona, and between "very common" and "moderately common" in Kentucky, Utah and Georgia.

Thus, New Jersey had the worst combined ranking for the executive branch and Kentucky was second. Steve Beshear, meet Chris Christie.

The Kentucky General Assembly ranked at or near the top in perceived corruption. It was among seven legislatures where reporters saw legal corruption as extremely common, and among ten where illegal corruption was seen as very common.

When those two categories are combined, Kentucky, Illinois, New York and Alabama have legislatures perceived as more corrupt than those in the other 46 states.

Among judicial branches, Kentucky was one of 15 states where illegal corruption was deemed "slightly common"—only California ranked higher—and one of seven where legal corruption was seen as "moderately common," with only Nevada ranking higher.

But even when the judicial rankings were included, Kentucky ranked first in perceived legal corruption and third in perceived illegal corruption. The researchers noted there were "no responses from Louisiana, which is historically one of the more corrupt states in America."

There are countless pitfalls in surveys like this—such as the number of reporters surveyed, the experience and knowledge of those reporters, their level of cynicism, the influence of recent events, their own definitions of what is corrupt, and so on.

Beshear has run an administration free of outright scandal. He hasn't give us much to worry about. But I worry about the General Assembly.

It's been 23 years since the FBI caught a substantial chunk of the legislature and lobbyists in a corruption sting. The scandal, the convictions and the resulting ethics law ended the cozy relationship between legislators and lobbyists, and Kentucky has one of the nation's strongest legislative ethics laws.

Nevertheless, the legislature has done little to stem the influence of campaign money, which becomes more important with each election cycle—first as Republicans consolidated control of the Senate, then as they moved toward taking control of the House.

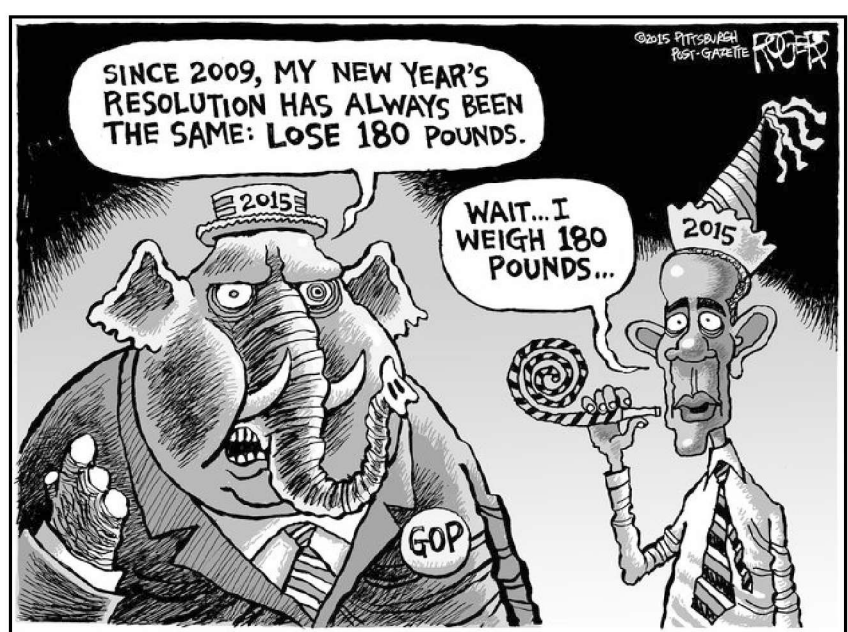

That was on display last fall, with advertising financed by anonymous contributors playing a greater role than ever. When some reporter gets around to looking at it, we'll have more food for thought.

Examples of this legal corruption can get lost in the avalanche of money and legislation, but it was found after last year's primary that lobbying interests gave almost 40 percent of the money received by the legislature's party caucuses, and much of the rest came from people who stand to lose or gain at the hands of the legislature.

One example was the nursing home industry, which has been so successful in its lobbying efforts that AARP ranks Kentucky last in long-term care services and support for seniors.

But we're first in corruption, as perceived by those who are supposed to sniff it out. That's something for legislators to chew on as they return to Frankfort.

I'd like to see a Pew Foundation two-question survey for baseball fans across America:

✓ Would you like to see Pete Rose's name on a Baseball Hall of Fame ballot?

✓ If not, would you vote to eliminate other rascals, rogues, scoundrels, womanizers and cheats with plaques at Cooperstown?

These include: Ty Cobb, Cap Anson, Leo Durocher, Gaylord Perry and a lot more.

Rose, who will be 73 in April, is a confessed liar and cheat.

Cobb was a violent loon, Anson a racist, Durocher suspended for gambling, and Perry an avowed cheat.

Truth is, Rose helped enrich MLB by millions of dollars in 23 seasons.

He drew fans to see him play in 3,562 games; won three batting titles; had a 44-game hit streak; owns three World Series rings; had best ever 4,256 hits; and played in 17 all-star games.

To bring Pete Rose in from the cold would make MLB another mega-bushel of money, score public relations points, and give Americans a feels-good-to-forgive moment.

We'll get you out of mud, ice, or any other problem. We tow any size vehicle!

•Janet Bledsoe, proprietor of Country Blooms, had a blessed Christmas when her seven-year-old granddaughter, Brooklyn Roland, was discharged from the hospital to return home to heal after having major surgery, December 17. Brooklyn is still recuperating at home and must take a number of precautions to avoid infection. Mary Jane Day thought Brooklyn's days may be brightened if she received an enormous collection of get well wishes, so she's asking anyone and everyone who would like to bring cheer to a little girl who has suffered with pain for over three years, to mail a card to Brooklyn Roland, 1592 Lindin Court, Florence, KY 41042.

•Diane Young has been busy, not only with Christmas, but with three family birthdays as well. Her husband, Ron, had one on December 11; grandson, Jared, on the 26th; and brother, Ed, on the 27th. The Youngs enjoyed Christmas Eve at their home with the family, with lots of culinary delights and a day of fun and Christmas crafts with the grandchildren. Ron had shoulder surgery on December 27th, and Diane said she hadn't realized how much he did around the house until she had to do it herself. Their son, Ronald, and his fiancée, Brittany, were married on December 27, and Diane spent the previous day making their wedding cake. CONGRATULATIONS TO RONALD AND BRITTANY, AND HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO RON, JARED, AND ED.

•Bob and Alex Weldon received an early present from Lee Green and Tony White. Lee and Tony installed the final thirteen radiators (that had been sandblasted) in Seven Pines. Thanks for the gift of a warm and toasty Christmas!

•Bob Weldon's friends, Mrs. Betty Lukashuk, Kay Corbin, Jackie Works and Joyce Willmes, traveled from Northern Kentucky to Warsaw to attend the Gallatin County Community Choir concert, December 16. Prior to the concert, Bob and Alex met them at Jewell's on Main for a pre-concert dinner.

•Jamie Jones joined Bob, Alex and Malinda Weldon at the Gallatin County Historical Society Christmas Party. It was a fun evening and the highlight was Shirley Warnick at the piano with Bob and Jamie singing Christmas carols too loudly.

•Bob, Alex, Laura and Malinda Weldon spent the Christmas holidays in Milwaukee, Wisconsin with Alex's mother. Alex's siblings and all the grandkids were there, including Alex's nephew who flew in from Spain. It was a wonderful week.

•Bob and Alex Weldon attended a small dinner party on Saturday night in Cincinnati with new friends from the Polish American Society of Greater Cincinnati.

•Mary Jane Day reports a great Christmas. Their son, Robby, and his three daughters, Erica, Sidney, and Maddy, were with them starting on Tuesday, as were son, Randy, and his son, Blayne. On Friday, the Days welcomed daughter, Denise Gubbels and her husband, Tony; granddaughter, Ashley Boyer, with her husband, Ryan; and great-granddaughter, Perry; granddaughter Tata Dolen, with husband, Zach; and great-granddaughter, Finley, who had all flown in from Nebraska and all stayed until the following Tuesday. Everyone enjoyed being at home for Christmas, but they also took time to visit some of the local sites. They went to the Union Terminal in Cincinnati, where the kids particularly enjoyed the Children's Museum. The family also visited the Louisville Slugger Factory and Museum, and the Manger in Mt. Healthy, which is a family tradition since Mary Jane was a child. She and Bob took their children, and now they make sure the great-grandchildren have a chance to enjoy it as well. It was a wonderful and precious time for the family, and they enjoyed their time together before flying home on Tuesday. Mary Jane reports that all arrived safely at their destinations.

•Amy and Greg Dickerson celebrated Christmas Day with family at their Warsaw home this year. They enjoyed the company of their children, Brett, Bryan, Storm, and Hayden Dickerson; Rebecca Riesenberger, and Amy's sister, Ashley Wartman of Dayton, Ky. They all enjoyed Amy's excellent dinner, exchanged gifts, and watched their traditional movie, National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation.

•Betty and Boyd Lionberger enjoyed a visit from daughter and son-in-law, Julie and Tim Hamilton, and granddaughter, Hannah Hamilton, with her friend. They enjoyed dinner together before the Hamiltons left for home. Boyd reported that they went to Hometown Pizza to celebrate Betty's birthday, which was December 11.

•Barbie Wright reports their busy Christmas and New Year's activities. Christmas Eve is also her oldest son Jack's birthday, and he turned 23 this year. They celebrated with a birthday lunch from Ming Moon, then had Grandma Betty Wright, Aunt Beth Oldendick, and cousins, Chloe, Gabby, Theo, and Ellie over for cake and ice cream. Theo also brought his girlfriend, Gabby Hignite. They had a lovely celebration, then it was time to leave for Lexington to celebrate Christmas Eve with Barbie's sister and her family. They returned to Warsaw in time for Midnight Mass at St. Joseph, then finally got to bed in the wee hours of the morning. Christmas Day, the kids allowed them to sleep until 10:30, which was a first for the Wright family. They opened presents at home, then went to Grandma's for Christmas lunch/dinner and opened more presents. Unfortunately, Joe Wright was sick and unable to join them, and Heather had gone to Ashland to be with her daughter. Beth's friend, Mike Philpot, joined them, and Beth and Mom put on quite a feast once again. The day after Christmas, Spike and Jack went to see the new Hobbit movie with Spike's friend, Tim Furnish. They said it was good - Barbie said it's not her cup of tea, so she'll take their word for it. In the afternoon, Spike, Ben, and Barbie worked on Ben's Eagle Project. Saturday, the whole family went to visit Aunt Irene in Cincinnati - AFTER the UK/UL game, of course - and had a great visit. Afterwards, they went to Red Robin for dinner as their Christmas gift from Aunt Irene. On Sunday, they learned that some of Spike's cousins from Illinois would be coming through Northern Kentucky the next day on their way home from vacation and wanted to get together. The Wright family arranged to meet them for dinner Monday evening at the Oriental Wok. It was quite a party! All six of Barbie and Spike's family, Betty Wright, Beth Oldendick and her kids, Joe and Heather Wright, and the four cousins. It was a great time, and the best part was the trip to Graeter's after dinner! The rest of the week was mostly spent sleeping late and staying up later, hanging out and doing a bunch of nothing. One exciting thing is they finally finished Ben's Eagle Project! The Historical Society now has a fully functioning handicapped accessible ramp. Barbie says it's beautiful, too - not that she's biased or anything. New Year's Eve was quiet at the Wright house. Spike and Barbie watched movies all evening. Maggie went to a get-together at a friend's house, so they had to go pick her up just after midnight. Sam and Ben came downstairs long enough to do the countdown at midnight, then disappeared back to their rooms and computers, and Jack celebrated New Year's Eve with his girlfriend. They ended the week with two birthdays on Friday - Barbie's and Sam's. Barbie said, "Yes, he was born on my birthday! It keeps me young - I haven't aged since he was born. I just let him have all the birthdays!" They had a great day, which started off by unexpectedly buying a new car - although they'd been planning to, they didn't know it would be that day. However, the blue van finally gave up the ghost and they had to do it. So that was a fun birthday "present"! They had cake and ice cream with Grandma and the Oldendick girls, but Beth had to work and couldn't make it and Theo had other plans. Then Spike and Barbie and their family went out to dinner at Red Robin. To celebrate the last day of Christmas break, the Wrights went out to dinner at El Nopal in Carrollton with the Ackermans and the Morleys. Greg Morley thought it would be funny to tell them it was Judy's and Barbie's birthday, so the ladies were given sombreros to wear, the wait staff sang them a birthday song, brought a Mexican dessert - and smashed whipped cream in their faces! Barbie remarked that she knew they did that and she still wasn't expecting it! She got Greg back though - he was wearing whipped cream before they left the restaurant. HAPPY BIRTHDAY BARBIE, JACK, SAM, AND JUDY!

•Loren Roberts celebrated Christmas by staying Christmas Eve in a complimentary jacuzzi room at Sparta Ramada Inn. He celebrated New Year's Day with dinner at Sunset Grill.

Card of Thanks

Isaacs

It is difficult to find words to express how thankful we are for your expression of love to our family during this truly difficult time.

Perhaps you sent a lovely card or sat in a chair. Perhaps you sent flowers that we saw setting there.

Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, as any friend could say. Perhaps you weren’t there at all, you just thought of us that day.

Whatever you did to console our hearts, we thank you so very much for whatever part you played.

A special thanks to everyone who brought food, lent a helping hand by setting up and cleaning.

Special thanks to the pallbearers and to the Gallatin County Fair Board for letting us use your building.

Thank you to Darrell Maines, your words are inspirational and were a comfort for all who attended.

Growing up in a small town in Canada

By Joan Higgins
I would like to share my experience growing up in a small town in Northern Ontario.

The town of Nakina was formed in 1923 because the Canadian National Railroad decided it was an ideal spot for changing crews. The town was originally about 20 miles down the tracks and they moved some of the buildings by flat car to the new spot. At first, the town consisted of the railroad station, post office and grocery store. The population was usually around 700 people. Over the years, it never grew much more.

My father was one of a few in town who did not work for the railroad. He was employed by Austin Airways (based in Toronto) to open a base of operations to serve the north, the Department of Transportation, the Ojibway Indian reservations and church diocese. He flew a single engine Norseman and most flights were no more than 150 miles from Nakina.

In summer, the plane was fitted with pontoons and landed on the lakes. It was changed over to skis for winter when the lakes were frozen enough to land a plane on the ice. As the years went by, the area became a tourist attraction for fishing and fishermen came from as far away as the United States. Dad also delivered to the outposts and churches. Come to think of it, he even delivered mail, groceries and medicine. That airplane was their lifeline.

The winters were long and harsh, but we always coped. The temperature could go down to 60 degrees below zero and averaged about 30 degrees below zero. We actually participated in outdoor activities like ice skating on an outdoor rink.

I attended school in a two-story building with four classrooms, the principal's office, and a small gymnasium. Each classroom had several grades in each room. Our education in Nakina Public School only allowed us to complete the tenth grade. We had to go to another town that had 12 grades and stay with friends or relatives. We didn't have a cafeteria and we walked home for lunch.

I must mention the hours of daylight in the north. In winter, it got dark about 4 p.m. and the sunrise was about 8 a.m. In summer, darkness didn't come until 11 p.m. and it was daylight by 4 a.m.

The winter snow didn't leave until late April and it started snowing again in September. We went Trick or Treat in the snow!

We had no television in the north but we could pick up a few radio stations. One in particular was WLW in Cincinnati.

There was no road into Nakina until 1955 and you could only get there by train or bush plane. When the road was completed, they could finally run telephone lines. What an exciting time! The switchboard consisted of 200 phone lines and three long distance lines. No frills there!

Just as the north depended on the bush planes, the town depended on the trains to bring supplies, the mail and even the daily newspaper. The newspaper came from Toronto, so we always read a day-old newspaper.

Life in the north was challenging but we managed quite well.

I arrived in this area 50 years ago and quickly found that Kentuckians are a lot like my fellow Canadians, always friendly and helpful.

Thank you for letting me share a bit of my life with you.

On the lookout

A pair of American Bald Eagles sits in a sycamore tree on a Craigs Creek island. The big birds were probably waiting for a fish to swim by. Not long ago, eagles were rarely seen here but these days several stop off as they migrate south or spend the winter as long as the river and streams don't freeze over. Photo by Kelley Warnick

News from the 4-H Desk

by Lora Stewart

As young people spend more time than ever in front of a television or a computer screen, the 4-H Media Smarts Youth will empower young people to make healthy choices about nutrition and physical activity by helping them understand how media can influence their lives. The first meeting will be held on Wednesday, January 28th after school. This program will help young people build knowledge and skills in the areas of nutrition, physical activity and media analysis.

•Physical activity – Young people discuss the importance of daily physical activity for promoting health and practice ways to be more active in their daily lives.

•Media analysis and production – Young people explore the connections between media and health and learn to analyze and create media messages. Young people will develop their own media message with the help of KET to promote positive messages about nutrition and physical activity to their peers.

•Nutrition – Young people learn about several key concepts in a balanced diet and practice ways to make smart snack choices in real-life settings.

positive messages about nutrition and physical activity to their peers.

Habits that start in childhood and are reinforced in the teen years become lifelong behaviors. The Media-Smarts Youth program is one tool to help ensure that these behaviors are healthy ones.

If you are interested in learning about putting together a media message about nutrition and physical activity then come Wednesday, January 28th. You must have a permission slip to attend which is available in the 4-H newsletter and the Gallatin County Extension Office.
